

Unit tests

Login unit tests were performed to check the functionality of the login page.

Tested were the following cases:

- Normal input of email and password
- No input of either
- Wrong email/password

The unit tests worked as intended and raised errors when the input/formatting was false and, in the case of correct formatting, the database was checked to compare the entries. If the values existed in the database, the login would be successful and the application would load.

The following activity diagram shows the logic behind the login page and unit tests.

Employee login logic

